UNDERGROUND GAS LINE LEAKS (Early Detection Saves Money)

As neighborhoods get older, so do the underground gas lines. Leaks are likely to occur in steel gas lines after only five years.

The utility company knows this and is on a mission to upgrade steel gas lines to plastic wherever possible and at the homeowners expense.

Leak detection crews are out in force and sweeping gas lines in every neighborhood red tagging homes where leaks are found. Replacement of the underground gas line is upwards of $800.00 and more if the trunk line is on the other side of the street.

Underground gas line inspections are inexpensive and can prevent delays in closing or costly litigation after closing. The one year warranty also provides a peace of mind for the new homeowner.
